CONSTRUCTION WATCH

Thursday, November 19, 2009, by Sara

A tipster sent along this photo taken last night of the rapidly-approaching-completion Rubinstein Atrium at Lincoln Center, formerly the Harmony Atrium. Now we can finally get a visual on those promised 20-foot-high walls of plants (and coming soon: sandwiches!) designed by Tod Williams Billie Tsien Architects. We dug through the photo albums for a look at what used to be in the Harmony Atrium days.

The previous incarnation of the Harmony Atrium:

It still is a dark, and uninspired space: a total waste of money.

It is a fabulous addition to the neighborhood.

I agree it looks dim and dingy. Very surprising given how spectacular the rest of the Lincoln Ctr reno looks. Maybe at the end of the day the problem is that calling a tunnel an atrium doesn't make it stop being a tunnel.
